A Dead Man Restored to Automatic Nothing more marvellous than the following story, told in the letter of a Globe Democrat correspondent, has ever been in print. It rivals the fantasies of E'gar Pec. Under the date of New York, the 19th inst., the correspondent The mind, with all its component parts, has sive: Yesterday your correspondent called gone, I fear, never to be restored." says: Yesterday your correspondent called Dr. Clarence Bigelow's attention to an article trioted recently in the city newspapers, descriptive of an Australian discovery whereby cactle can be frezen, laid away for weeks, and then brought back to life and genuine activity. The purpose of this discovery is to ship live meat in ice boxes, and kill it on the other side of the ocean after it is thawed out again. In this way the cost of food and attention oun be dispensed with while at sea. In cases of emer gency a man traveling from California can buy a first class ticket for himself, and ship the rest of the family, tooluding the mother in Isw, in parent refrigerators. At the termious of his uney he could restore his children to their youthful vigor, and his wife to her proper sta-Your correspondent asked the dector what he thought about it.

"It is nothing," said he, "to the great crowning effort of medical science that I witnessed a few nights since." "Pray, what was that?" was asked.

The dector reflected for a few moments, and then he spoke as follows:

"When you publish what I am about to tell you it will set the whole country ringing. Ac companied by my friends, Judge Warren and Dr. Chambers, I went last week to one of the uptown hospitals, whither we had been invited by Professor Diremus and the house physicians. Ou our arrival we were shown at once to the dissecting room. At the foot of an am' phitheatre of sears stood a long table, on which rested some immovable objet, covered with a white sheer. More of the seas were occapied by medical students from Bellevue and Rossevett hospitals. Mestle and party were a signed to chairs on the platform. Shore ly after So'clock the white sheet was removed. and I saw ou the table the nude body of a mao. Presently Dr. White stepped down by the table and said: 'My fiends, the body before me is that of a man who hied to death. He wis employed in a planing mill on West Sixteenth street, near North liver. He fill ngamest one of the swift revolving saws, one of the large arteries in his arm was severed, and the blood, is life. flowed out before assistance could arrive.

"The dector paused," continued Dr. Bige low, "for a few moments, looking, meanwhile, attentively at the body. Then he continued: There is a more dessation of life, because the blood was diverted from its natural channel. I can discover not jury save the severed ar very. It is absolutery necessary to the success of the experiment we are about to witness that the ergaes of the body be unitjured, for any material injury to any organ-1 mean vital oreas-would procude the possibility of its performing its functions, since science cannot restore the organ. But where the action of the organ is intercupred by some cause that does not materially injura the organ, then I believe that the organ may be again compelled to perform its daty. As the great wheel of a mill may be stopped by shutting off the water, so may it be made to revolve again by turning the water on, thus the bood, which turns the wheels of the body, having been diverted, the wheels stopped, I claim that this body may be brought to life. Whether the soul has depart ed and can be brought back, or whether the mind may be restored, I cannot tell; but I be lieve I can again set at work every material organ of this body. I have carefully olesid up the severed arterns."

He then called upon Prof. Doremus and Dr. Chambers and myself to assist him. An in cision was made in the body above the heart. and the vena cava and great coronary vein were burst open. In these openings were inserted small silver tubes. On the left of the table stood two galvatie batteries. A slight out was made just above the plexus of the four inferior cervical nerves, and another above the first dersal nerve. The enducting wires of the re spective batteries were placed in connection with these curs. A small pair of bellows was inserted in the mouth of the corpse, and Dr. Chambers took charge of them. Professor Doremus was places in charge of the batteries. At this moment attendants led two full-grown living sheen into the room, and, at a signal from Dr. White, stood them near the table. Meanwhile. I had, under instructions. connected two hollow rubber strings to the silver tubes already mentioned. The other ends were soon connected with the large arte ries of these two sheep. The two tabes throb bed as the warm blood of the sheep bounded turough them. It was a breathless moment, and as we leaned forward our interest was paioful. Dr. Chambers began to work the beliows, and the lungs of the body slowly responded. Three or four minutes of the most anxious suspense ensued, as Dr. White leaned over the body pale with excitement. No move ment could be seen save the slow rising and falling of the chest of the man's body. Two mioutes more, and one of the sheep staggered and tell. Rising erect and seizing some instruments,

Dr. White called out : 'Now, Prof. ssor !'

I, an instant the powerful current of all of us, from time to time feeling the pulse of the new living man, and at times administ tering small quantities of stimulant, not only to him but to ourselves. Our patience was well rewarded; every mement the pu'se grew strong. er and the breathing deeper. Several times the man opened his eyes, but, apparently, took no notice of anything. At daybreak, when Judge Warren and I lefe the place, he was sle-ping. Dr. Bigelow was asked if the man was still living, and was he getting on nicely.

Oh, yes; he is living. The experiment have described to you took place just five days.

ago I have only this moment returned from the hospital. The man's wounds are healing, and he is able to move about the room." "Does he feel all right, and will he be able to go to work again ?"

"I am afraid not" He spoke in a low, doubting tone of voice, which revealed the fact that there was more of the story than Rigelow had yet related. Pressed to tell the full facts in this case, he said:

"Well, the man eats and drinks; seems to be afraid of other people, or more curious than afraid, and is affected strangely by the next and cold. But he can neither read nor write; does not know the use of books, plates, or knives and forks. He is not able to talk, but cries out very loudly, or jabbers in an inarticulate manner. Once in a while a word can be distinguished, but the mandoss not appear to perceive any difference between it and his jargon. The animal life has been restored, but not the spiritual.

gone, I lear, never to be restored."

This is, indeed, a wonderful achievement of science. It may seem too wonderful for belief, but your correspondent can youch for the great respectability of the persons named. They are gentlemen of high standing, and the proof is ir-
